

ISQ launches mobile application for iPad and iPhone

Users will now have access to the complete training programs on their mobile devices. These Mobile Applications were developed by Xpand IT and now are available for free in the AppStore.

Xpand IT, the leader in enterprise mobile applications services, announced the official launch of ISQ mobile applications – private organization which provide services such as: inspection, testing, training and technical consulting. The application provides detailed information about ISQ technical courses & training activities to offering more convenience for all users. Designed for iOS devices (iPad and iPhone), these apps improves the best user experience and create a communication channel well appreciated by the public in general. These free mobile applications are available on the AppStore.

This application has a simple and intuitive navigation, separated into three core modules: Advanced Research, Courses and Official Centers. Users can make an advanced search for ISQ technical courses, using keywords such as: training topics, regions, locations, prices and others. Other benefit is the ability to realize a pre-registration training in a simple and quick way. Now, users will have access to unique features, search useful information and pre-reserve their training courses.

Xpand IT as leading provider of enterprise mobile applications services, with more than 100 applications in the App Store and Google Play, confirmed that the mobility area continues with an interesting growth, although the current economic crisis paradigm. After several mobile applications development for some reference customers, we identify that many companies are more prepared to align this communication channel with a global organizational strategy goals.
